Respiratory Care Seminar
Friday, October 28, 2011
Schaetzel Center, Scripps Memorial Hospital La Jolla
La Jolla, California
Course Overview

Pulmonary diseases come in a variety of forms and consume a large portion of our health care resources everyday. It is estimated that 24 million adults in the United States alone suffer from COPD (Chronic Obstructive Pulmonary Disease); 12 million of which are physician diagnosed while another 12 million are undiagnosed. Asthma currently affects 23 million people in the United States and 12 million of them have experienced at least one asthma attack during the last year. Approximately 40,000 infants and 150,000 adults have respiratory distress syndrome while another 12 million have obstructive sleep apnea. In order to meet the needs of the growing population of patients with respiratory diseases, practitioners must stay current on the latest in evidenced-based medicine and technology developed for optimal care.

The 2011 Respiratory Care Seminar will be taught by leading professionals who will address these pulmonary challenges and offer evidence-based tools and strategies to improve patient care. Attendees will participate in a day of educational sessions and have the opportunity to interact with specialists in the field. Recent advancements in respiratory and pulmonary equipment will also be discussed.
